

~ The Day Before YOU Die ~

By: Joan Pacinabo

I look at you and see your face
A face so tame and full of kindness
I can see that you are so weak
And you really wanted to speak

I keep on watching you...
Whenever I'm in your room
Beause I know I'm going to miss you
Especially now that your gone

And the day before you die
I feel like writing something, don't know why
I never had a feeling it will be too soon for my tears to fall in my eye
Because to all of us you say "goodbye"

After that night that I gave you a poem
And I'm heading to my Station
I pray to God that He will do what's best for you
And what's God's decision, I'm dying to know

I fell asleep so late
I keep thinking the status of your health
I keep on wishing that you're going to wait
Because for the last time I want to be by your side
Because don't want to arrive there that you already died
We know that you already feel so tired...

I don't want you to hear that I'm crying
I tried to keep what I'm feeling
But I just noticed that I'm shaking
I really need to let my tears on flowing

I love you so, Lola Judith
Hope you feel that I really care for you
Hope you know that I'm sincere in everything that I do
You're more happy in God's hands,
So I understand that you should go.
