

You're not brave enough to love me

By: Joan Pacinabo

Note: Lesbian love poetry

You want to find a man to love,

Because this is right...

And accepted to society, above all to God.

Of course, you are right.

So I wish you all the best,

I will watch you fly away with delight.

I wanted you to find that happiness,

And acceptance that you've been praying.

I am contented,

To have you only as a friend.

Even if you said, I'm your ideal person,

And we're good together.

You said I made you feel special in many occasion,

We wanted each other.

We talked about so many things,

And the different vibes in between...

Send one's body a warning.

But you are not brave enough,

You want to stop.

Following what's inside your heart.

Because I am a man but trap,

In a woman's body...

And you live in a Muslim Country,

They condemned Homosexuality.
